

VARIETY BY DISTORTION

Take any head. You can distort it by the following methods. This is valuable in caricature. You can trace a photo, and draw from the tracing, or take any of your own drawings and distort them.

*Square off
the tracings
or drawings
shown. Change
the proportion
full of squares.*

You can also change the square size.

Here again is a chance for your own invention. Draw a square around your subject. Divide each way into eight or more parts. If you wish to distort separate features, change the size of the squares into which they fall. Make the line cut through each square as it does in your copy, but changed to fit the new proportion of your squares. $1/2$, $1/3$ square, etc.
