

Pat the Rat went for a stroll. His dad told him to stay on the path. His dad also told him not to go into the forest. Pat did not listen to his dad. He ran into the forest and got his tail stuck in a trap in the sand. He could not escape. He sat down and began to cry. Later, an ant came by and offered help. Pat did not think a tiny ant could help. The ant said, "My friends can stand on the trap and open it." The ant and his friends worked together and got the trap open. Pat was free! Pat thanked the ants and ran home. Pat learned a valuable lesson that day.
